

The John Quaregna Award for Young Remodeling Professionals

Established in 2001, this award recognizes service, both locally and nationally, of an individual who has taken notice of the industry early on. This award recognizes the youthful spirit, enthusiasm, and commitment of John Quaregna, whom the award is named after. He joined NARI at age 19, and has been active on both the local and national levels since then. At age 38, John became the youngest NARI President ever.

The intent of this award is to encourage young remodeling professionals to participate in NARI, and to thank and reward their efforts in hopes that they will continue to stay involved and boost the long-term vitality of the organization.

Candidates should have a track record of promoting NARI standards and the image of the professional remodeler to the industry, locally or nationally, to the public, through local media and through promotion of awards and other community efforts, and to their company. They should have a record of encouraging employees or coworkers to attend educational programs and certification modules.

Entrants must be a member in good standing for at least 5 years, be under the age of 40, have served on various committees on the local or national level, served as an officer of their local chapter, have shown a strong commitment as a leader to NARI, and has grown their business by adhering the principles of NARI membership.

1. Nominations should be submitted within a standard 3-ring binder (not to exceed 11 by 12 inches) and include at least 2 letters of recommendation.
2. A head-and-shoulders photo of the nominee must be included.
3. Material supporting nominee's participation, promotion of NARI, length of service, awards, etc.
